Model Flying Club Helps Food Pantry, Educates Festival Attendees

Members of Dare County Radio Control Flyers, our local radio control model aviation club, held the Outer Banks Festival of Model Aviation at their field in Manns Harbor last month to provide local residents with an opportunity to learn about the hobby by flying a radio control aircraft, assisted by a club flight instructor.

According to Jim Davis, the club's president, this was the fifth year for this event and was well-attended with forty-nine guests participating. Of those attending, thirty-nine decided to try flying, and all successfully completed their no-cost introductory flight without any difficulty.

The club used this event to once again educate the public about the exciting hobby of model aviation, and to assist the Beach Food Pantry by asking participants to bring at least one non-perishable food item per person as admission. The items collected proved to be enough for 257 meals—enough to feed a family of four for twenty-one days according to Elisabeth Silverthorne, executive director of the Beach Food Pantry. Both Davis and Silverthorne expressed their gratitude to those who attended and made this so successful by donating to help local residents who are less fortunate.

Following flying activities, the day's long-awaited event was held, in which five radio control planes were to be awarded by raffle drawings. Three of these planes included everything needed to fly, as well as one-year memberships in the Academy of Model Aeronautics (AMA), and in the case of the grand-prize winner, membership in the club. Tickets for this raffle were only issued to guests who had performed a flight that day. Jason Sherwood's ticket was drawn as the grand-prize winner, while Joseph Hrupsa and Ashley Henry won the second and third place prizes respectively. A second raffle, in which tickets were sold for a chance to win two radio control airplanes was also held, with Wesley Kerns and Steve Garrett each taking home a plane.

As a result of this public flying event sixteen people, including six elementary, middle, and high school students, decided to continue their model aviation experience and became club members. "I'm so pleased to see young people getting into the hobby and I'm encouraged by the fact that twelve of our newest members will be flying with at least one family member," stated Davis. "Model aircraft are not only educational and fun, they can be a way for family members to share good times together and make lasting memories," he added.

The club also wished to recognize and thank the AMA Foundation for the grant they provided to assist the club in funding this event for our local residents to enjoy.

As a self-supporting, nonprofit organization, Dare County Radio Control Flyers is always looking for new members to share in their family-friendly model aviation activities. The club was chartered in 1989 by the AMA and promotes aeromodeling as a recreational activity to residents of the Outer Banks and surrounding areas. The club's current membership of thirty-five, includes those from a variety of educational and life-experience backgrounds, ranging from 5 to 96 years of age.

Membership is open to anyone, regardless of experience level, and to encourage families to enjoy the hobby together, family memberships at a discounted rate are available.

Further information is available on the club's website at dcrf.club, their Facebook page, or by contacting them by phone or text-message at 252-656-2FLY (2359).
